Swiss Federal Tax Administration SFTA

In Switzerland competence for taxation lies at cantonal and communal level; they collect approximately 80% of total tax revenue. The Confederation is competent to levy tax in specific areas only, which are defined in the Constitution. This makes the system complex, in particular when it comes to international coordination.

SFTA is the federal government's tax authority. It is in charge of determining and levying federal taxes such as VAT and customs and duties, stamp duty and tax at source. Taxation of income and corporate benefit is in the competence of the cantons. SFTA is in charge of negotiating international conventions on double taxation, adherence to the OECD tax standards such as the scheme on automatic exchange of information, coordination of international administrative assistance in tax matters together with the FOJ.
